

DEFENDS ACTION BEFORE SENATE

MEMBER OF COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING LORIMER INCIDENT TALKS.

GIVES A PLAIN STATEMENT

Says But One Witness Testified to Receiving Money to Vote for Illinois Senator.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—With a dash of humor, Senator Johnson (Democrat, Ala.) spoke in defense of Senator Lorimer in the senate today. Johnson was one of the investigators who signed the committee report declaring Lorimer not guilty.

"Three senators," he said, "ran a hard race for first place in the opening of the debate of this case. The senator from Indiana (Hovey) led, with the smoke of the battle still fresh on his garments and his flushing from his eyes, struck the first blow.

"Close upon his heels came the senator from Oklahoma (Owen) with a tomahawk and a scalping knife. The peacemaker blood in his veins surging and throbbing at the sight of the senator from Indiana, he struck the second blow. A little later came the senator from South Dakota (Crawford) and his path in this case was as fast and furious as the stampede of a frightened herd of buffalo on the South Dakota plains trampling down everything and leaving only desolation, dust and death behind.

Attacking the arguments made against Lorimer by the three senators, Johnson said that Hovey alleged the discovery of ten tainted votes; that Crawford also found ten, but they were not the same ten, and that Owen gave a list of eleven so-called bribe takers.

An analysis of the testimony was presented and the senator insisted that it proved Lorimer's claim to his seat to be stainless and just. He declared White was the only Illinois legislator who testified he had been bribed to vote for Lorimer. He said the other witnesses swore they were not bribed in Sen. Lorimer's interest. The witnesses against Lorimer were accused as perjurers, while those who testified for the senator were declared to be "infinitely superior to these vile creatures."

Opposing all suggestions looking to a change in the manner of the election of senators, Senator Johnson today addressed the senate on the resolution providing for the election by direct vote.

"The house committee on ways and means today postponed action on the Canadian reciprocity agreement until tomorrow when the committee will probably vote to report favorably on the measure embodying the agreement.

PLANS CREATION OF STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Assemblyman Hall Has Introduced Bill Which Will Abolish State Boards of Regents.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 10.—To develop an educational system in Wisconsin in which no part of the system shall be neglected and in which no child shall be left behind, Assemblyman Hall has introduced a bill to abolish the boards of regents of normal schools and of the university and to create a state board of education.

Mr. Hall discussed this subject at length today. He said:
"The object of the bill presented provides for a state board of education to take the place of the boards of regents of the state university, the normal schools and the mining school is to bring our entire educational system under one general head for the benefit of all the schools. The idea of expert commissions or boards, composed of able men who give all their time to the work they are selected to do, has not only proved in good in our state government, in which we now have the great questions of railway regulation, of taxation, and many others of equal importance handled by such boards, but the principle is now being extended to the conduct of our cities and other municipalities.

"The argument has proven good by experience that a small board of able men is more capable in the conduct of public affairs when the members give their entire time and energy to their work, than a large board, possibly composed of men of equal ability, who give only a small portion of their time.

"Our state university has become a great educational institution. Last year its expenditures were in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. Our normal school system has been enlarged from time to time by the building of new schools, and now we have eight such schools, on which we expended last year upwards of $65,000. These institutions, represented by their regents, are now asking for still larger appropriations of this legislature. The people are, and long have been, generous to these institutions.

"But what of the common schools? The fact is generally recognized that our common school system has been seriously neglected and that conditions are today very deplorable for a grand state like Wisconsin, which may with just pride point to its several great institutions of higher learning. We have approximately 750,000 children of school age in the state. The seating capacity of our common schools is only 575,017, so that our school houses would not accommodate at least 200,000 of our school population. There are at least 100,000 boys and girls between 7 and 14 years in Wisconsin who never attend school. The compulsory attendance law is presumed to insure the attendance of nearly all these 100,000, but the fact remains that 27 per cent of the whole number of such pupils are not in school. In one-fourth of the rural schools of the state there is an average enrollment of less than 15, while the daily attendance is much less. In hundreds of rural schools there is an average daily attendance of less than 10 pupils.

"These are the conditions as they exist and as they have been for years under our present system. The bill provides for a state board which will not only take over the management of institutions of higher learning but it will also have power to take up our educational problem in its entirety, study the needs of the system and devise ways and means for the betterment of conditions. It will tend to better business management. It will pay many times its cost in economies effected. It will harmonize the conflicting interests of the higher schools and bring them into closer relations with each other. It will also bring them into closer touch with the common schools. It will, as time passes, be able to bring about such a reorganization of our entire educational system that no portion of it will be neglected while other portions are requiring so large a part of the state's attention and absorbing so large a percent of the educational funds."

Madison, Wis., Feb. 10.—State board of agriculture in annual convention adopted a memorial to the legislature asking the retention of the tuberculosis law and the strengthening of many of its features. The tuberculosis law may not be all it should be, said Dean Russell. "There may be some hardships caused by it in requiring a good bill of health before cattle can be sold, but these are matters of administration and should not be attributed to the test itself. SPOKE AT COLUMBUS TODAY

President Was Speaker of the Day At The Corn Exhibition—Will Attend Banquet At Springfield, Ill., Tomorrow.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Columbus, O., Feb. 10.—A large section of President Taft's home state had the first opportunity today to welcome him since he became President. From the time his special train crossed the Ohio river this morning until its arrival in the capital city this afternoon the President was given a continuous ovation. Crowds gathered at every station to cheer the distinguished traveler and every crossroads furnished his little knot of men, women and children, who waved hats and handkerchiefs as the presidential special sped along.

The presidential party reached Columbus promptly on schedule this afternoon. On the arrival of the special train at the Union Station, where thousands of cheering citizens had gathered, a special reception committee of one hundred leading citizens made a procession in broad street, where motor cars were in waiting. Governor Harmon, Mayor Marshall and the officials of the National Corn Exposition were on hand to greet the distinguished visitor. The President expressed himself delighted with being in Ohio.

In accordance with President Taft's wish there was no parade and no military escort. The party proceeded at once to the Ohio State Fair Grounds, where the President delivered a public address before the National Corn Exposition that has been in progress there the past ten days. As soon as he had concluded his address the President made a tour of the exposition, the boys' groups furnishing the escort. The program for the remainder of the day and evening called for an automobile ride about the city and a dinner as guest of the officials of the National Corn Exposition and a number of leading citizens. At 9:45 tonight the President resumes his journey to Springfield, Ill., where he has an engagement to speak at the Lincoln anniversary banquet tomorrow night.

PETER CASSIDY WAS SUDDENLY STRICKEN

Heart Failure and Asthma Caused His Demise While Being Taken to Mercy Hospital.

Taken sick yesterday morning, Peter Cassidy of the town of Rock died suddenly of heart failure and asthma while he was being conveyed to Mercy hospital in the ambulance last night about eleven o'clock. Cassidy had not been feeling well all day, and in the morning visited a doctor who diagnosed his case as sore throat, and gave the man some medicine. In the afternoon, Cassidy was again troubled with his respiratory, it being difficult for him to breathe, and went to another doctor. At six o'clock he went to the Empire hotel and engaged a room for the night. He went out after supper and returned about nine o'clock, when he was taken very sick. A physician was called and he ordered that the man be taken to the hospital at once. About half way there, he breathed his last, vigorous efforts to save his life being unavailing. The body was removed to D. Ryan & Son's morgue.

Cassidy was a man about 55 years of age. He was born on a farm in the vicinity of Janesville and was well known in the city, as he had lived near here all of his life. FIRST GAME PLAYED IN NEW GYMNASIUM

Milton College Was Defeated by Platteville Normal in First Game in New Building.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milton, Feb. 10.—Before the largest crowd in its history, Milton college christened the new gymnasium Thursday evening by being beaten twice at basketball. The match game between the college and Platteville Normal was close throughout, the outcome being uncertain until the last few minutes of play. Milton's captain had left school during the past week and the team was handicapped by having to play a new man at center. Platteville surprised Milton both in basket-shooting and in team work. The final score was 25 to 17. Referee, Russell of Platteville; umpire, Rounseville, Milton.

For the curtain-raiser the high school boys defeated the college seconds, 12 to 11, in a very fast and furious and decidedly rough game. The cheering for both college and high school was organized and plenty of noise was furnished. In the first half, the game was a close one, with the college leading. A band composed largely of college students entertained the spectators. After the game an informal reception was held in most of the Platteville players.

ADVERTISING TALKS

By W. C. FREEMAN.

The business "rule of three"

First: Ability.

Second: Integrity.

Third: Advertising.

A man to succeed in business must have special ability for the line of business he selects. If his ability is backed up by inherent integrity, then he has a solid foundation on which to build.

To erect a great business institution on that foundation the aid of advertising is absolutely necessary.

Of course, every man who is able and honest, and who advertises does not always succeed—that's the pity of it, but more men who have ability who are not as scrupulous as they should be, even though they advertise, fail, than do men who possess the three characteristics that everybody is willing to concede are necessary to the building of any business.

Ability has got to be backed up by energy, integrity has got to be backed up by common sense, and advertising has got to be backed up by truth.

It looks simple, does it not? And it is simple.

Any man who has something to sell to the people in any community, if he has a good article—if he does not misrepresent in any way, can make advertising pay, providing he carries into his advertising copy the principles that dominate his business character and his personal character.

Of course, advertising cannot be gone at in a haphazard way. There has got to be just as much stick-to-itiveness applied to advertising as there is applied to the business itself.

There must be an equal amount of courage applied to the advertising, also, as well as faith, because if a man goes into advertising without these attributes, he is pretty sure to fail.

The home newspaper is the people's best way to reach the people. Every merchant in every community should know by this time that to sell his merchandise he must tell his people through the daily news bearer, received in every home, what he has to sell and what he will sell it for.

TEACHING A LESSON.

As the car swung sharply around from Shaker street not a man arose to offer his seat to the handsomely gowned woman who was climbing desperately to one of the straps. Whereupon Mrs. Kyckers, who was sitting next to her husband, exclaimed, indignantly, "I think it is just shameful for all you men to stay seated and make that poor woman stand!"

Mr. Kyckers was not impressed. "Do you know who that woman is?" he asked.

"No," his wife retorted, "I don't know who she is; and it doesn't make any difference who she is; she's a woman, and ought to be treated with decency."

Mr. Kyckers spoke patiently, "My dear," he said, "she is the wife of the trolley company's president."

An Extraordinary Case.

A young attorney not noted for his brilliancy recently appeared in court to ask for an extra allowance in an action which he was, so unfortunately as to have been retained in. The court, not discovering anything at all unusual, complicated or extraordinary about the litigation, inquired of the young man: "What is there about this that to you seems extraordinary?"

"That I got it," blandly and innocently replied the youthful aspirant for fees.—Case and Comment.

Settling George.

"No, George," she said in her gravest tones, "I cannot become engaged to you, and I am very sorry to see you show this mad infatuation. Remember that I am much older than you are, and believe me when I say I will always be an older sister to you."

"You ain't hardly any older than me," declared the disappointed youth.

"I am 15, George, while you are but 14. And remember, George; that to a woman a year is a lifetime."

What She Was.

Mrs. Ellenbert—Is Mrs. Smith her husband's second wife?

Ellenbert—No; why do you think she was?

Mrs. Ellenbert—Why, I have heard several people say he had been married before.

Ellenbert—He has been married before, but that doesn't make the present Mrs. Smith his second wife; he has been married twice before.

Crafty Wooer.

"How did Spinkles win Mrs. Will-june over, by giving her consent to his marrying her daughter?" asks the young man with the large pipe.

"Met the old lady in the dark hallway and kissed her," then apologized, saying he was "sure" she was the daughter," explains the young man with the excited socks.—Judge.

How It Was.

Brother Lobstock—How did yo' all got yo' nose busted?

Brother Tump—I done slipped down an' plumb lit on that.

Brother Lobstock—But, name o' goodness, sah, yo' nose isn't located on yo' back.

Brother Tump—No, sah; an' needer was brudder Wack.—Puck.

PAY ROLL FRAUDS BIG

U. S. STEEL CORPORATION DE-FRAUDED OF THOUSANDS.

Evidence Shows Theft Made Possible by Carrying Dead Men As Employees.

Hammond, Ind., Feb. 10.—That the payroll frauds in which Charles Bloomhoff and John T. Caldwell, timekeepers in Indiana Steel plant at Gary, now on trial for conspiracy to defraud, have cost the United States Steel corporation a minimum of one hundred thousand dollars and a possible maximum of half a million, have been developed in evidence at the trial now on in the Hammond superior courts.

The stupendous size of thefts were made possible by carrying dead men, straw men and missing men on the pay roll, through the alleged complicity of the defendants.

It has been brought out during the trial now under way for three weeks that a dead employee of the United States Steel company was carried for months on the pay roll. Bloomhoff and Caldwell are asserted to have purchased a garage and automobile on Michigan avenue, Chicago, with proceeds of the alleged peculations. The case will probably go to the jury today. The defendants charge that higher officials of the United States Steel company are involved in the conspiracy.

IT WAS REALLY PAINLESS

In what people say to me after I get their offending molar extracted, I used to give Gas and Ether and Chloroform. I have abandoned all that. Because I have a Better Method. No unconsciousness. No Dullness. And best of all, People say I really do not hurt them. Try me next time you need a Dentist. I seem to have the happy faculty of Not Disappointing people.

BUSY TIMES AT PRESENT FOR THE TRAVELING MEN

Traveling salesmen from all parts of the country and representing firms selling goods of all kinds, are pouring into the city daily at this season. This is the regular busy period for the drummers and each day a long list of them is to be found on the registers at the local hotels. Spring and summer orders for their firms are the attractions and each is striving to outdo his competitors in selling goods. It is the early bird that catches the worm as far as accommodations are concerned, for rooms at the hotels are in great demand. At the Hotel Myers last night, the management had to turn away prospective lodgers at eight o'clock and at the Grand hotel customers have been refused accommodations because there were none.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

THAT "hated and love are much more similar than friendship and love," was the thesis a very thoughtful young person put up to me the other day.

What do you think of it? Myself, I think there is a specious varnish of truth over it, but down at the bottom, it's dead wrong. If she had said that hatred and infatuation were more similar than friendship and infatuation, I would have agreed, but that is quite another matter. I wish our young people could be made to understand more thoroughly that of the truly beautiful and lasting love, friendship is a very large component part.

Married life is a journey which leads occasionally over the mountain crests of sentiment, but for the most part, through long stretches of the valley of everyday living, and unless you have enough friendship for each other to make you thoroughly enjoy the daily traveling hand in hand through the valley, I think you are taking a big risk to start on the journey at all.

The beginning of the sentimental mountain crest of a wedding and newly married life may look fair to you, but remember that "journey's end" is a very long ways off and many valleys must lie between.

Myself, I would put up my money on the enduring qualities of the marriage founded on a love which had a very large measure of friendship in it much more quickly than on the marriage founded on the passionate love that may turn out to be only infatuation, after all.

I once knew a girl who said she wanted the man she should marry to be able to say, "I am absolutely positive that you would be my best man friend if you were a man."

Some of my friends called that eccentric, but I loved it. I think any girl should be able to say the equivalent of that about the man she is going to marry; that is:

"There is that in this man which would make me love him even if there were no sex attraction."

Real love, it seems to me, should be a wonderful fusing of equal parts of friendship and passion into something immeasurably greater than either. Leave out either ingredient, or put in too much of either, and the alloy is spoiled, but better have too much of friendship than the other way round.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THE chief pleasure in eating does not consist in costly seasoning or exquisite flavor, but in yourself. Do you seek sauce by sweating?

—Horace.

New Ways of Serving Common Foods.

As there are over two hundred ways of serving the common potato, and most housekeepers' knowledge consists of about five methods of cooking them, we need to add a few new recipes to our repertoire.

Parisian Potatoes.—Wash, pare and cook in cold water eight small potatoes, remove in half an hour and put on to boil for 15 minutes in boiling salted water. Drain and put into a baking dish, beating three times with a fork and a third of a cup of butter.

Celery and Cream Cheese Salad.—Mix one-half cup of finely-chopped celery with one cream cheese. Make the mixture into small balls, arrange on lettuce leaves and pour over a French dressing. Sprinkle with paprika and garnish with radishes cut in fancy shapes.

Spiced Apples.—Wipe, core and pare six large apples and arrange in a baking dish. Mix sugar, cinnamon and a dash of salt, and fill the cavities. Add water and bake until the apples are soft, heating often with the hot sirup in the pan. Remove from the oven, cool slightly and pile a meringue on top of each apple. Return to the oven and bake eight minutes.

Chill and serve with sugar and cream. To make the meringue: Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, add four tablespoonsful of sugar gradually, beating, then flavor with half a teaspoonful of vanilla.

Apple Charlotte.—Put a cup and a half of apple sauce in a buttered baking pan. Remove the crusts from four slices of stale bread, butter generously, cut in triangles and arrange as closely as possible on top of the sauce. Sprinkle with a third of a cup of sugar and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with thin cream.

Dressed Cucumbers.—Peel the cucumbers and draw a three-lined fork the entire length all around, then cut in slices and serve with French dressing.

Sometimes people write personal messages on postal cards, in which event the mail service becomes a great disseminator of knowledge.

Makes It Easy for Preachers.—There are several places in London where preachers can buy sermons printed. They cover all subjects, and can be had for every season.

Not the Type.—"I hear you were very much disappointed in your mother-in-law."

"Completely so."

"In what way?"

"Why, she's simply perfect."

TINKLE OF WEDDING BELLS GROWS FAINT

June, With Her Dainty and Seductive Days, Much Needed in the Marriage License Business.

The county clerk's office is the scene of consternation and much misgiving. The man behind the desk, H. W. Lee, carries a worried look and his usual genial smile is gradually fading away.

The cause of all this trouble is the sudden lack of applications for marriage licenses. There is no doubt about it. It stands out in black and white upon the records and there is no denying the fact that the affairs of Cupid seem to be at a standstill.

Of late couples have strayed in a desultory manner to get the necessary permits and this week, so far, beats all records for poor business in the marriage license line. Mr. Lee holds that he is not to blame, for he is there and willing as ever to accommodate the heretofore anxious people.

He is optimistic, however, and although only three licenses have been issued thus far this week, he has not given up hopes for a "run" later on.

There was some hope entertained at the beginning of the year, of an average of one a day for the 365 days and in order to bring this about, it is even rumored that something in the shape of premiums to couples contemplating matrimony, may be brought into service.

RICHMOND.—Richmond, Feb. 9.—The L. A. B. will meet with Mrs. H. L. Blakeman on Wednesday afternoon, February 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kallman spent from Saturday till Monday with relatives at Ft. Atkinson.

The dance at the hall last week was attended by over sixty couples.

Frank Konneth was called to bed last week by the serious illness of his mother.

A. E. Hulce visited his cottage at the Assembly grounds Saturday.

Warren Muck has been numbered among the sick the past week.

Robert Kallman, of Mukdago, Ill., visited relatives here the fore part of the week.

The chicken pie dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McFarlane Wednesday was well attended and the proceeds amounted to about $15.00.

Mrs. Will Krantz and children of Clinton, are visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar.

Should Consolidate Them.—"There is," observed one eminent paragon, "more than one way to kill a cat." We suggest that all the different methods be put to work.—Topoka Capital.

A number from around here are planning on attending the auction at Will McQuillens, February 15.

Mr. V. P. Sturdevant is quite poorly again. Dr. Dunn was called the first of the week.

J. Waters was a Whitewater visitor Tuesday.

The handiest thing on your desk—a scratch pad. Good big block for 5c at Gazette office.

The Famous Rayo. Gives the Best Light at Any Price. When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the least effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for some other lamp, and although you get a more costly lamp, you can't get a better light than the white, mellow, diffused, unflinching light of the low-priced Rayo. Has a strong, durable shade-holder. This season's burner adds to the strength and appearance. Made of solid brass, nickel, and easily polished. Once a Rayo User, Always One. Dealers Everywhere. If not at yours, write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the Standard Oil Company (Incorporated).

MRS. TREVVLAN NAPIER—TESTIFIED TO UNTRUTH OF RUMORS THAT SHE WAS MARRIED TO KING GEORGE.

This picture of Mrs. Napier, daughter of Admiral Culme Seynour, was taken in 1809, on the day of her marriage to Captain Napier of the British navy. She took the stand in the trial of E. P. Mylius in London, testified that she had seen King George three times in her life, once when she was 7 years old, again at Portsmouth in 1829, and in 1893 at a garden party, but had not spoken to him. She had not visited Malta, the place of her alleged marriage, until after the marriage of King George to Princess May.

The Katherine Kip Editorial.

THE VALUE OF CRITICISM.—Don't let the fact of being criticised spoil the intention to do something good or to attempt some worthy achievement. Every person who attempts to rise or to extend his influence is liable to the criticism of the envious and the thoughtless.

"Censure and criticism never hurt anyone," said Gladstone. "If time they show a man his weak points and forewarn him against failure and trouble if also they cannot hurt him unless he is wanting in character."

If we are put on guard as to the weak points in our character we can remedy the defects. If we are allowed to go on without criticism or censure we are liable to allow these weak places to be the means of destroying the strength and beauty of both our reputation and character.

People living in countries where dikes or levees are used to keep the sea back or rivers in confinement know the value of watching for the weak spots and pay the highest tribute to the man or woman who detects a leak in the wall. Next such person living in the same countries realizes that if the leak is not at once taken care of it imperils the existence of all within reach of the flood.

The wise man realizes that when a weakness in his character is pointed out he is given an opportunity to make repairs and that failing to do this he invites a whole flood of evils that may destroy the character he has been so long and so patiently building up.

The person who criticizes is so frequently looked upon as a foe that one looks upon all criticism as coming from a hostile person and all censure as an evidence of ill-will. Exactly the reverse is frequently the case.

To men of a certain type criticism at all is taken as a declaration of hostility and immediately there is preparation for warfare and reprisal.

This should not be. When criticism is directed towards us we should study the matter as earnestly as we would study any other important problem that interests us, and we should seek to apply a remedy to the defect pointed out. The criticism may not have been given in the most friendly spirit, but we can thus turn it to our own account.

More big successes have been built upon criticism than the world will ever know. Men of the right mental caliber understand its value and turn it to their profit, and perfect their characters and round out their careers by it.

One of the surest indications of a tendency towards failure is the resentment of criticism and a refusal to respond to censure by the right kind of action. Self-satisfaction has ruled more promising careers than could be fated in a day of hard work, and criticism accepted and properly applied has made more than could be enumerated in the same length of time.

CAINVILLE CENTER.—Cainville Center, Feb. 9.—The Helms Union will meet Thursday the 16th with Mrs. Dave Andrews.

ANNUAL CHURCH HOME GATHERING

OF CONGREGATIONALISTS WAS HELD AT THE CHURCH LAST EVENING.

POWER IN ORGANIZATION

And Service Thus Made Possible Was the General Theme of Meeting—Flourishing Condition of Church.

Members of the Congregational church and their friends came together last evening to celebrate the closing of a most successful year for that institution in the festivities of the annual home gathering. It was a time for the members to stop and think of things accomplished during the past year and to plan for the achievements of the one just opening. It was an occasion which brought its glad memories, its recollections of sorrow and its ambitions and future hopes.

Following the reception given in the afternoon by the minister and officers of the church, the annual dinner was served in the parlors of the church to a large throng. It was like the gathering of a large family and was an assemblage which spoke well for the Congregational church of this city.

About half past seven an adjournment was taken to the church auditorium where the program of the evening was given. The various members possessed more than usual interest from the report of the clerk and reading of the history to the address of the pastor, David Denton. The musical numbers were exceptionally fine, including selections on the organ by Miss Pond at the beginning and close of the program, the singing of "The Spring Song" by the Junior choir, and several solos by Mrs. Park. The latter numbers were especially enjoyed, and it seemed that the audience would never tire of listening to Mrs. Park's interpretations of her selections.

Mrs. Roy Palmer read the church history for the year, and in it also emphasized that in the period just closed there had been two golden events—the installation of Dr. Denton, and the return for a brief day of that other leader, Mr. Denton. The former event was one to be long remembered for its simple yet impressive ceremony and its beautiful messages brought by the large number of representatives of the Congregational church who were present from out of town, among whom Dr. Ganssman was prominent.

In speaking of Dr. Denton's flying visit, the historian said: "We shall always be especially thankful because Mr. Denton's coming meant so much to those who loved him, just as we shall always remember with peculiar pleasure our 1910 Christmas event, because it was the last social event graced by the presence of our beloved Mr. Wright. His memory has been honored in our memorial services but we may take at least a moment here to regret the absence for the first time in our memory, of the kindly face which has had so beautiful an influence on our life."

"It seems especially fitting that the last social gathering which he attended should have been the Sunday school, to which he largely devoted his entire life."

C. S. Cleland submitted the report of the nominating committee consisting of the recommendations for officers for the coming year which was accepted. The report of the clerk, John M. Whithead, brought out the fact that the church was undergoing a gradual and steady growth. A total of 51 members had been received by letter and by baptism during the past year, and by letter, 31, gave a total net increase in membership of 31, making the total membership of the church 823. Mr. Whithead reviewed briefly and in an optimistic manner the growth which has occurred in the last 26 years, during which time he has occupied the position of clerk. At that time the membership was very small compared with the present figures and with the large number of communicants which the church now boasts, he believed that greater things were possible on the part of the church.

Dr. Denton's address on the "Relation of Organization to Life" also emphasized the inherent power which the church possessed, and the fact for this power came from the varied interests of life. In his usual genial manner, Dr. Denton spoke in part as follows: "One of the most important subjects which any business, legislative or church can consider is its organization. For it is only by means of an organization that any product can be turned out; any laws made; or any moral service be rendered to the community. We are to consider, tonight, the relation of our church organization to our work of moral and spiritual service to the public. I have heard many seemingly intelligent people say that religion does not need organization. A man may believe in God and live a good life without joining a church. This is a very plausible but very superficial remark. One might as well say 'I believe in ideas but I do not see the need of any words to express them; I believe in love as a sentiment, but not in deeds to show it; I believe in bread and meat, but I do not believe in a loaf of wheat or a herd of cattle; I believe in the conviction and character of a man but I do not believe in his being born into a physical nature.'"

"The real trouble with most of us, in matters that refer to religion and morals, is that we do not apply to them the ideas of common sense with which we treat our business or our physical nourishment. A very little reflection would show anyone that no form of work or service for others, or self-expression of any sort is possible without organization. If I want to turn the wheels of this factory I must organize from the ground up. First an engine to transform and transmit the power, through coal and steam or electricity, till every shaft and pulley is doing its work; and then, particular forms of machines for the peculiar product, and even the labor of the mechanic and artisan, organized, until the whole of the factory is articulated and harmonized to produce the greatest number and best quality of goods. This is not the only kind of organization—nature herself in all her infinite variety of shrub and tree, cereal and fruit, animal and man, are but various forms of organization to produce certain chemical and biological products—say, to produce certain nets and ideas that we call love, courage, honesty, faith, hope, piety, patriotism and service for God and man. "Here is a corn stalk. Consider its root, its stem, its leaves, its tassels, and its ear of corn, fully ripe. What is all this variety and differentiation of form for? It is for the purpose of bringing forth its ripe fruit. It is for the purpose of expressing itself. Here is the child with hands, feet, eyes, brain and all the fearfully and marvelously created organic parts of its person—physical and spiritual. What is it? An organization. What is its purpose? Life expression. Can this child grow up into manhood, learning about life, disciplining his work and at last doing the work of a man, unless the character of a man, unless it has parts and organs? As you perceive, the question is absurd. You might as well expect the absurdities of Alice in Wonderland and expect to see the smile without the cat. To be born is another way of saying to be organized. Without organization you can't think, or love, or work, or pray. There is no such thing as doing work, or making character, or serving God or man, without organization."

"So when you look at the diagram of our church you see in it the body of which our faith, our love, and labor are—the intellect, the will and the conscience. It is our instrument with which we labor, and pray, and express the various moods and feelings, affections and graces of our religious life. And if anyone should say, 'Why so many societies and clubs and officials?' the answer is perfectly simple and natural. Merely because the men and women whom we are seeking to help have so many and various interests, and tastes. You see the church has an evangelized or preaching department; it has a pastoral or social department; and it has an educational or teaching department. And it must have these because the human soul is built that way. Because in a word, the development of the human soul has produced art, and music, and science, trade and finance, statesmanship and literature, and each of them must have its own organ to express its ideas and do its work."

"So must the church, and so you must use one or more of these organs if you are to express your faith and love, and labor for yourself or your fellowmen. If you have the voice and ear you will sing out, but you cannot utter a sound without the organ of the body. If you have the faith and love you will want to express it; but you cannot without some instrument of expression. The organization of the church is the fitting instrument for the expression of the purest, noblest life of the soul."

CHARGED WITH THE THEFT OF A PURSE

Man Who Is Alleged to Have Picked Up What Did Not Belong to Him, Arrested For Grand Larceny.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Monroe, Wis., Feb. 10.—A charge of grand larceny was preferred against John O. Herrington, practically a stranger here, to whose door was traced the theft of a pocketbook containing $55, taken from the First National Bank, Harrison, Ind. The pocketbook had been in the bank and bank clerks noticed a small sum and bank clerk noticed the pocketbook lying on the desk, Fred Reiman, of Adams, shortly afterward returned to the bank for the lost purse, having carefully left it there, and subsequent investigation by Marshall Hunt revealed the pocketbook in Herrington's possession. He indignantly denied having taken the purse, claiming it looked so much like his own that he took it with that impression. The man came here from Dodgeville and had been living on West Russell street.

He was taken before Justice Baller and his hearing set for Monday at 1 o'clock.

Exciting Runaway.

Fred Mahlknecht had an exciting runaway while returning to his home in Sylvester township after spending the day in this city. One of the colts which he had hitched to his sled took the hog over the top. In attempting to straighten out the horse, a horse which he was leading got loose. In an attempt to catch the horse the team started off toward home on the run. They ran into a tree where they were split apart and one horse ran on carrying the neck yoke in its breast. A gang of men employed in clearing the road caught the animals and returned to the sled to find Mr. Mahlknecht unharmed though the center was wrecked. The injured horse is very sore but will recover from the wound. Mr. Mahlknecht is a son of Mrs. Christ Hartwig, of this city.

Mrs. Zunkkehr.—The remains of Mrs. Peter Zunkkehr, formerly cheese inspector in this district, will be brought here tomorrow morning from Gratiot and taken to St. John's Evangelical church, where services will be held. TODAY GALA DAY IN CITY OF STOUGHTON Biggest Ski Hill in the World, Located There, Was Officially Dedicated This Afternoon.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Stoughton, Feb. 10.—Today was the greatest gala day this city has yet experienced in its history. All the state officers and their wives and fifty of the best skiers in the United States were gathered here to observe the formal opening and dedication of the greatest ski hill in the world. There is no question about making a new United States ski-jumping record. The attendance will exceed that of even the national event.

State officers arrived on a special train from Madison this afternoon and were met at the station by Attorney Henry Huber and J. W. Hollenbeck. They were driven at once in carriages to the grounds, where boxes had been reserved in the grand stands.

Among the skiers were Francis Kempe of Duluth, world's professional champion; Barney Riley of Colorado, amateur champion of America, and Ole Felling of Duluth, who holds the unofficial record for the longest jump ever made in America, a distance of 144 feet. Said Felling today after having slid off the scaffold yesterday: "Providing the wind is not against us, there is no reason why we cannot make a new record on Stoughton. It is one of the finest I have ever seen and as good as any jumps of 135 and 140 feet should be made."

The attendance this afternoon exceeded 5,000. Hotels, restaurants and churches served special meals with additional facilities.

One thousand wagon-makers, 1,200 school children, 600 business employees and hundreds of city servants were freed from duty today to attend the big ski-fest. A Milwaukee train carried ten extra coaches and a special bus from Madison at one o'clock. Additional coaches are being carried from Chicago, Rockford, Beloit and Janesville.

OLD RESIDENT DIED AT NEPHEW'S HOME

Caleb Truesdell Passed Away at Home of Mert Truesdell in Shopiere on Monday.

Shopiere, Feb. 8.—Caleb Truesdell died at the home of his nephew, Mert Truesdell, here, Monday afternoon at the age of 81 years. Mr. Truesdell was one of the old settlers of this county, having been a resident here about fifty years.

Deceased was born in Herkimer county, New York, January 1, 1830. He came to this state about 1860 and settled in Rock county. The qualities of Mr. Truesdell were such as to make him loved by all who knew him. In his earlier days, when in the prime of life, he was ever ready to be of service to others no matter what sacrifice he was called upon to make. Sound judgment and the ability to make and hold friends were his most striking characteristics. His life was an example of one who lived by the golden rule, seeming ever to be bound by its precepts. The community feels that his influence will always be felt and all realize that they are better for having known him.

He is survived by three brothers, James and Alonzo of Shopiere, and Elmer of Parkersburg, Iowa; also two sisters, Mrs. Leroy Adams of Springfield, Mo., and Mrs. Anna Holmes of Chicago.

SANDY SINK.—Sandy Sink, Feb. 9.—Born to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fiedler, Feb. 5, a son. A large crowd attended the dance at R. Becker's Wednesday evening.

George Oakley is on the sick list. Paul Yabnick and wife are visiting the former's parents.

A. Golling of Milwaukee spent from Thursday until Sunday with August Burtox and family.

Mrs. Clara Becker spent Sunday and Monday with her parents, near Milton.

W. S. Fiedler and family entertained Mr. and Mrs. Gus Fiedler and Mr. and Mrs. John Oakley on Sunday.

Arnest Waldo spent Sunday at A. Albright's.

Again the Exception.

The school teacher was trying to illustrate the difference between plants and animals.

"Plants," she explained, "are not susceptible of attachment to man as animals are."

"How about burrs, teacher?" piped a small boy who had passed the summer in the country.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

CHAPTER XIII.

THE OLD SHEEP HERDER. The ranger was awakened in the first faint dawn by the passing of the girl's light feet as she went across the hall to her mother's room, and a moment later he heard the low murmur of her voice. Throwing off his blankets and nanking such scant toilet as he needed, he stepped into the hall and waited for her to return.

Soon she came toward him, a smile of confidence and pleasure on her lips. "How is she?" he asked. "Quite comfortable."

"And you?" His voice was very tender. "I am a little tired," she acknowledged. "I didn't sleep very well."

"You didn't sleep at all," he declared regretfully. "Oh, yes, I did," she replied brightly.

These two ardent souls confronted each other in absorbed silence with keener perception, with new daring, with new intimacy, till he recalled himself with effort. "You must let me help you if there's anything I can do. Remember, I'm your big brother."

"I remember," she answered smilingly, "and I'm going out to see what my big brother is to have for breakfast."

Cavanagh found the street empty, silent and utterly commonplace. He went forth to his duties with a deepened conviction of the essential lawlessness of the state and of America in general, for this spirit of mob law was to be found in some form throughout the land. He was disgusted, but not beaten. His resolution to carry out the terms of his contract with the government remained unshaken.

He carried with him also a final disturbing glimpse of Eliza Wetherford's girl that had indeed threatened his peace of mind. There was an involuntary appeal, a wistful depth, to her glance which awakened in him an indignant pity and also blew into flame something not so creditable—something which smoldered beneath his conscious will. She had not escaped her heritage of passion, and her glances, innocent as they were, roused even in him something lawless.

His pony plodded slowly, and the afternoon was half spent before he came in sight of the long, low log cabin which was the only home he possessed in all America. For the first time since he built the station seemed lonely and disheartening. "Would any woman for love of me come to such a hearthstone?" he asked himself. "And if she consented to do so could I be so selfish as to exact such sacrifices? No; the forest ranger in these altitudes must be young and heart free; otherwise his life would be miserably solitary."

He was just dismounting his ruddo supper when the feet of a horse on the log bridge announced a visitor.

With a feeling of pleasure as well as relief he rose to greet the stranger. "Any visitor is welcome this night," he said.

The horseman proved to be his former prisoner, the old man Edwards, who slipped from his saddle with the never failing grace of the cow man, and came slowly toward the cabin. He smiled wearily as he said: "I'm on your trail, Mr. Ranger, but I bear no malice. You were doing your duty. Can you tell me how far it is to Ambro's camp?"

There was something forlorn in the man's attitude, and Cavanagh's heart softened. "Turn your horse into the corral and come to supper," he commanded with western bluntness. "We'll talk about all that later."

Edwards accepted his hospitality without hesitation. "I'm going up to take Ambro's place," he began after a few minutes of silent eating. "Know where his camp is?"

"I do," replied Ross, to whom the stranger now appeared in pathetic guise. "Any man of his age consenting to herd sheep is surely hard hit by the rough hand of the world," he reasoned, and the closer he studied his visitor the plainer he felt his ungenerous past.

"I suppose Gregg paid your fine?" he said.

"Yes."

"In any other town in the state you'd have come down the line."

He roused himself. "See here, Mr. Ranger, you've no warrant to holler at me, but I told you the truth. Young Gregg got me to ride into the range and show him the trail. I didn't intend to get mixed up with a game warden. I've had all the confinement I need."

"Well, it's a closed incident now," interposed Ross. "We won't reopen it. Make yourself at home."

The stranger, hungry as he was, ate with unexpected gentility, and as the hot coffee sent his cheerful glow through his body he asked, with living interest, a good many questions about the ranger and the forest service. "You fellows have to be all round men. The cowboys think you have a snap, but I guess you earn your money."

"A man that builds trails, lays bridges, burns brush, fights fire, rides the roundup and covers seventy-five miles of trail every week on $80 per month and feeds himself and his horse isn't what I would call enjoying a soft snap."

"What do you do for it?"

"God knows! I've been asking myself that question all day today."

"This playing game warden has some snags too. That was a wild crowd last night. The town is the same old hole it was when I knew it years ago. Flan girl of Liza Wetherford's. Liza has changed terribly. I didn't expect to see her have such a skein of silk as that girl. She sure looks the queen to me."

Cavanagh did not greatly relish this line of conversation, but the pause enabled him to say: "Miss Wetherford is not much western; she got her training in the east. She's been with an aunt ever since her father's death."

"He's dead, is he?"

"So far as anybody knows, he is."

"Well, he's no loss. I knew him too. He was all kinds of a fool. He got on the wrong side of the rustler line-up. Them Wetherford women think a whole lot for you. Years like they'd both fight for you. Are you sweet on the girl?"

"Now, see here, old man," Ross retorted sharply, "you want to do a lot of thinking before you comment on Miss Wetherford. I won't stand for any hasty clicks."

Edwards meekly answered: "I wasn't going to say anything out of the way. I was fixing for to praise her."

"All the same, I don't intend to discuss her with you," was Cavanagh's curt answer.

The herder fell back into silence while the ranger prepared his bunk for the night. The fact that he transferred some of the blankets from his own bed to that of his visitor did not escape Edwards' keen eyes, and with grateful intent he said:

"I can give you a tip, Mr. Ranger," said he, breaking out of a silence. "The triangle outfit is holding more cattle on the forest than their permits call for."

"How do you know?"

"I heard one of the boys bragging about it."

"Much obliged," responded Ross. "I'll look into it."

Edwards went on: "Furthermore, they're fixing for another sheep kill over there too. All the sheepmen are armed. That's why I left the country. I don't want to run any more chances of being shot up. I've had enough of trouble. I can't afford to be hobnobbing with judges and justices. I'm just a broken down old cowpuncher herding sheep in order to keep clear of the liquor bill."

This seemed reasonable, and the ranger remarked by way of dropping the subject: "I've nothing to say further than this—obey the rules of the forest and you won't get into any further trouble with me. And as for being shot up by the cowmen, you'll not be disturbed on any national forest. There never has been a single herder shot nor a sheep destroyed on this forest."

"I'm mighty glad to hear that," replied Edwards, with sincere relief. "I've had my share of shooting up and shooting down. All I ask now is a quiet and the society of sheep. I take a kind of pleasure in protecting the fool brutes. It's about all I'm good for."

He did indeed look like a man in the final year of life as he spoke. "Better turn in," Cavanagh said in kindly tone. "I'm an early riser."

The old fellow rose stiffly and, laying aside his boots and trousers, rolled into his bunk and was asleep in three minutes.

Cavanagh himself was very tired and went to bed soon after to sleep dreamlessly till daylight. He sprang from his bed and after a plunge in the stream out about breakfast, while Edwards rose from his bunk growling and sighing and went forth to wrangle the horses, rubbing his hands and shivering as he met the keen edge of the mountain wind. When he returned breakfast was ready, and again he expressed his gratitude.

"Haven't you any slicker?" asked Cavanagh. "It looks like rain."

"No; I'm run down pretty low," he replied. "The truth is, Mr. Ranger, I blew in all my wages at roulette last week."

Ross brought out a canvas coat, well worn, but serviceable. "Take this along with you. It's likely to storm before we reach the sheep camp. And you don't look very strong. You must take care of yourself."

Edwards was visibly moved by this kindness. "Sure you can spare it?"

"Certain sure; I've another," returned the ranger curtly.

It was hardly more than sunrise as they mounted their ponies and started on their trail, which led sharply upward after they left the canyon. The wind was strong and stinging cold.

Taking pity on Edwards, who was shivering, Cavanagh turned off the trail into a sheltered nook behind some pine trees.

"How do you happen to be reduced to herding sheep?" he asked. "You look like a man who has seen better days."

Edwards, chafing his thin fingers to warm them, made reluctant answer. "It's a long story, Mr. Ranger, and it concerns a whole lot of other people—some of them decent folks—so I'd rather not go into it."

"John Barleycorn was involved, I reckon."

"Sure thing. He's generally always in it."

"You'd better take my gloves. It's likely to snow in half an hour. Go ahead. I'm a younger man than you are."

The other made a decent show of resistance, but finally accepted the offer, saying: "You certainly are white to me. I want to apologize for making that attempt to sneak away that night. I had a powerful good reason for not staying any longer."

Ross, smiled a little. "You showed bad judgment—as it turned out."

"I sure did. That girl can shoot. Her gun was steady as a doorknob. She filled the door. Where did she learn to hold a gun like that?"

"Her father taught her, so she said."

"She wouldn't remember me—an old cuss like me—but I've seen her with Wetherford when she was a kidlet. I never thought she'd grow up into such a queen. She's a wonder. Liza looked sick to me. She ought to send her girl away or get out. As you say, the Fork is no kind of a place for such a girl."

He spoke with a good deal of feeling, and the ranger studied him with deepening interest. He had taken on dignity in the heat of his protest, and in his eyes blazed something that was both manly and admirable.

"You're just the kind of a figure to catch a girl's eye. She likes you. I could see that, but you've got a good opinion of yourself. You're an educated man. Do you intend to marry her?"

"See here, Mr. Sheep Herder, you better ride on up to your camp." And Ross turned to mount his horse.

"Wait a minute," called the other man, and his voice surprised the ranger with a note of authority. "I was terribly taken with that girl, and I owe you a whole lot, but I've got to know one thing. I can see you're full of her and jealous as a bear of any other suitor. Now, I want to know whether you intend to marry her or whether you're just playing with her."

Ross was angry now. "What I intend to do is none of your business."

The other man was suddenly ablaze with passion. His form had lost its stoop. His voice was firm. "I merely want to say that if you fool that girl I'll kill you."

Ross stared at him, quite convinced that he had gone entirely mad. "That's mighty chivalrous of you, Mr. Sheep Herder," he replied cuttingly, "but I'm at a loss to understand this sudden indignation on your part."

"You needn't be. I'm her father!" Cavanagh fairly reeled before this retort. His head rang as if he had been struck with a club. He perceived the truth of the man's words instantly.

He gasped, "Good God, man, are you Ed Wetherford?"

The answer was quick, "That's who I am!" Then his voice changed. "But I don't want the women to know I'm alive. I didn't intend to let anybody know it. All the same, I mean it. If you or any man tries to abuse her I'll kill him! I've loaded her up with trouble, as you say, but I'm going to do what I can to protect her now that I'm in the county again."

Ross, confused by this new complication in the life of the girl he was beginning to love, stared at his companion in dismay. Was it not enough that Virginia's mother should be a slattern and a tennagant? At last he spoke, "Where have you been all these years?"

"In the Texas 'pen.' I served nine years there."

"Shooting a man. It was a case of self defense, but his family had more money and influence than I did, so I went down the road. As soon as I got out I started north—just the way a dog will point toward home. I didn't intend to come here, but some way I couldn't keep away. I shied around the outskirts of the Fork, picking up odd jobs of sheep herding just to have time to turn things over. I know what you're thinking about—you're saying to yourself, 'Well, here's a nice father-in-law!' Well, now, I don't know anything about your people, but the Wetherfords are as good as anybody. If I hadn't come out into this cursed country, where even women go congressing, but being hot headed, I must mix in. I'm not excusing myself, you understand. I'm not a desirable addition to any man's collection of friends, but I can promise you this—no one but yourself shall ever know who I am. At the same time, you can't deceive my girl without my being named in the funeral that will follow."

"You are only a distant and romantic figure to Lee—a part of the dead past," said Cavanagh. "She remembers you as a bold rider and a wondrously brave and chivalrous father."

"She must never know. You must promise never to tell her."

"I promise that," Cavanagh said, and Edwards went on:

"If I could bring something to her—prove to her I'm still a man—it might do to tell her, but I'm a branded man now and an old man, and there's no hope for me. I worked in one of the machine shops down there, and it took the life out of me. Then, too, I left a bad name here in the Fork. I know that. Those big cattlemen fooled me into taking their side of the war. I staked everything I had on them, and then they railroaded me out of the county. So, you see, I'm double crossed, no matter where I turn."

Every word he uttered made Lee Virginia wonder how she could have been so apparent to Cavanagh that Lee Virginia would derive nothing but pain and disheartenment from a knowledge that her father lived. "She must be spared this added burden of shameful inheritance," he decided.

The other man seemed to understand something of the ranger's indignant pity, for he repeated: "I want you to swear not to let Lee know I'm alive, no matter what comes. She must not be saddled with my record. Let her go on thinking well of me. Give me your word." He held out an insistent palm.

Ross yielded his hand, and in spite of himself his tenderness for the broken man deepened. The sky was darkening in the west, and with a glance upward, he said, "I reckon we'd better make your camp soon or you'll be chilled to the bone."

They mounted hastily and rode away, each feeling that his relationship to the other had completely changed. Wetherford marvelled over the evident culture and refinement of the ranger. "He's none too good for her, no matter who he is," he mused.

GEORGE SHIMA, JAP POTATO KING.

Stockton, Cal.—George Shima, a wealthy Japanese farmer, heralded throughout this section of the state as the "potato king," has cleared another fortune off his tract of reclaimed land in the famous San Joaquin delta region just west of this city. His net profits being estimated at $200,000.

Shima farmed 4,000 acres this year, practically all of which he planted in potatoes. The potato market has been exceptionally good and the growers have realized large profits. Off the 4,000 acres he harvested 500,000 sacks of tubers which have sold as high as $1.25 a sack. The estimated cost of producing the potatoes is 70 cents a sack. The potato king has disposed of all his crop, saving between 80,000 and 90,000 sacks, and if the market continues to rise his profits may exceed $200,000.

This is Shima's seventh successful year as a potato grower. He has been in the business for many years, the first two seasons having come out even. His last money several years, but his profits in the long run have wiped out his losses and made him rich.

Shima has potato raising down to a science and employs an army of laborers. His hunches and potato barges ply between Stockton and his island tracts daily. Some time ago he had an elegant home built in Berkeley and engaged a tutor to educate his children.

During the recent produce carnival in this city Shima contributed a dis-

MYSTIC NO. 9.

It is strange that the foolish superstition about the number 13 did not attach itself to number 9. Instead, for here are some very queer things about this number, and let him explain them who can.

All the products of 9 are 9, a fact that the sum of the digits in each case is 9. Illustration: Nine multiplied by 12 are 108 and the 1, 0 and 8, this number added together makes 9. But 9 multiplied by 11 are 99, and these two 9's added make 18. If the process be carried one step further, however, the 1 and 8 of the last number will give 9. No matter how large the number, multiply it by 9 and continue the process and you will get the same result.

It follows that all the powers of 9 yield 9, because they are merely multiples of 9. Thus 9 to the fourth power is 6561, the sum of whose digits is 18 and the sum of these again 9.

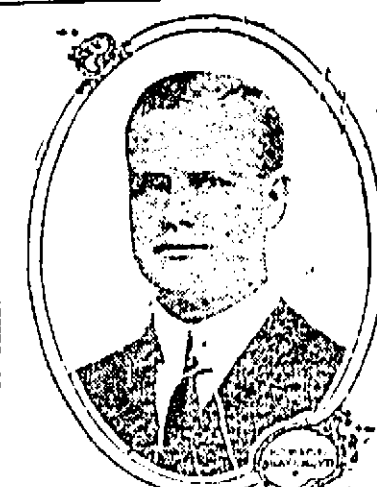

Multiply any number whatever whose figures are all the same, and the result will be a number consisting of a row of nines one less in number than the original, with two extra figures, one before and one after these, which are the digits of the multiple of a single one of the original figures with 9. Illustration: Nine multiplied by 777777 equals what? Here are seven 7's; write 9's one less in number—6; 666666. Now, 9 multiplied by 7 is 63; place the 6 before and the 3 after these 6's and your answer, 6366663, is correct.

Some quotients obtained by dividing 9 yield 9, but not all. Illustration: Nine divided by 2 is 4.5, and these two digits added produce 9. But 9 divided by 6 fails, as experiment will show.

If 9 be multiplied by any number reading 1, 2, 3, etc., and with the next number added, it will yield a number consisting of as many 9's as the number added. Illustration: Nine multiplied by 1 plus 2 is 11; 9 multiplied by 12 plus 3 is 111; 9 multiplied by 123 plus 4 is 1111; 9 multiplied by 1234 plus 5 is 11111. But past to this rule will not work.

WANTS TO BE GREATEST INDEPENDENT SUGAR PRODUCER.

New York, N. Y.—"I am in this fight to a finish. The day of monopolistic domination is past. The country, the public and great industrial enterprises themselves, demand competition. I propose to give the American Sugar Refining company or Sugar Trust a run for its money. The National Sugar Refining company of New Jersey is the trust's greatest independent competitor. I hold control of that company through the 93,000 shares of common stock held by my father to my sisters and myself. Only the courts can take that control away from me. As long as I hold control the Sugar Trust will know that it has a competitor in its chosen field."

"This is the declaration of independence of Horace Havemeyer, 24 years old, only son of the late H. O. Havemeyer, organizer and late president of the Sugar Trust. He is bucking up against the monopoly now harried on all sides by the federal authorities."

Worse and Worse.

"He spoke of my singing as a vocal stunt."

"Well, wasn't your singing a vocal stunt?"

"Sure, the work of an artist is never a stunt!"

"Still, I don't see how that has anything to do with your case."
